We wanted to take a moment to give you a brief update. The Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) and the Department of Health (DOH) are actively monitoring the situation, although they have not yet confirmed a specific cause. It's important to note that the Recreational Use Advisory remains in effect, and we kindly ask everyone to avoid the affected areas for your safety. Fortunately, both the DEC and DOH have indicated that there are no current impacts to our public drinking water supplies, and our Water Department is proactively implementing precautionary measures. We understand that this situation can be challenging, but please know that every effort is being made to ensure the safety of our community and our environment. Thank you for your patience.

What are these Local Law Review Workshops?

The Town of Franklinville began hosting Law Review Workshops in 2024 after New York State required our municipality to update the Uniform Fire Prevention and Building Code Law. That process quickly revealed the need for additional updates, such as creating a Mobile Food Truck Law, and has since expanded to include broader reviews of our zoning regulations. With many of our laws dating back to 1999, these workshops provide an opportunity to modernize our code so that it better reflects today's needs and continues to protect our residents and neighborhoods.

These workshops are informal, open discussions where ideas are shared and evaluated from multiple perspectives. They are always open to the public, and community participation is strongly encouraged. The more residents who take part, the more thorough and balanced our discussions become. Workshops are also an excellent time for asking questions and learning how proposed changes may affect different aspects of our community.

Currently, the Law Review team has completed a draft of a Short-Term Rental Law. This draft is under review by the Town Attorney and will then be forwarded to the County Planning Board. Once those steps are complete, the proposal will be presented to residents, followed by a public hearing for community input.
